ANNEX A

Background

Survivor Benefits

Nominated partner benefits were introduced to public service schemes between 2006 and 2009. As part of entitlement to those benefits it was a mandatory requirement that a nomination form had to be completed. This requirement was in addition to meeting the underlying conditions which must be satisfied for a continuous period of at least 2 years for a nominated partner pension to be paid.

Broadly these are:

- The scheme member is able to marry, or form a civil partnership with their partner;
- The scheme member and partner are living with each other as if they were a married couple or civil partners;
- Neither the scheme member nor the partner is living with a third person as if they were a married couple or civil partners; and
- The member and partner are financially interdependent or the partner is financially dependent on the member.

Nominated partner benefits were not introduced to the Firefighters 1992 scheme. However, members were given the opportunity to transfer to the 2006 scheme on preferential terms.

What's changed?

On 8 February 2017, the Supreme Court decided that refusing a claim on the grounds that nomination form had not been completed despite the underlying conditions being met is incompatible with Article 14 of the European Convention on Human Rights and was therefore unlawful.

The Supreme Court's decision also applies to other public service schemes, and since February SPPA has removed the mandatory requirement to complete a nomination form, although a form can still be completed on a voluntary basis. However, the underlying conditions have not changed and must still be met for a claim to succeed.

Proposals for Consultation

Survivors' Benefits

Of the three firefighter's pension schemes, only the 2006 scheme requires amendment, as that is only one to require that unmarried partners should be nominated by the member. This necessitates that a number of rules be amended and, in particular, the insertion of a new Part 2 rule 1(5A) to give a definition of the term "cohabiting partner" to replace the term "nominated partner". The new definition retains as many elements as possible of the previous term, whilst making it clear that there is no longer a need for a nomination to be made. It is proposed that the term "cohabiting partner" be used, as that is the term already used in the 2015 Fire Scheme.

If a member expressly wishes to make their intentions relating to survivor benefits known, the scheme manager can continue to accept a nomination form to enable them to do so, even though there will be no such express provision in the rules.

All qualifying cohabiting partners are being given the equivalent rights as spouses. In common with other public sector schemes being reformed, the amendment is being backdated to the inception of the scheme.

2015 Firefighters' Pension Scheme consequential amendments

Split Pensions

Members of the final-salary pension schemes are permitted to split their pension in the eventuality of a reduction in salary, so as to preserve the value of pension which has already been accrued. The policy intention is that the first part of a split pension in the 1992 and 2006 schemes should be subject to indexation. The rules concerned do not specifically provide for this. It is therefore proposed that equivalent amendments to rule B5A in the 1992 Order and Part 3 Rule 7 of the 2006 Order are made. The pensions concerned would be up-rated, as if subject to the Pension Increase Act 1971, from the time of the reduction in pay until retirement.

Pension Sharing on divorce

On divorce from a pension scheme member, under pension sharing provisions, spouses or civil partners of scheme members can be awarded part of their pension as a credit. Current scheme rules do not take account of changes to the related legislation on pension sharing. Amendments are therefore proposed to both the 1992 and 2006 schemes, so as to ensure that pension credit members can continue to commute their benefit as permitted by the overarching legislation.

Cross Border transfers to the 1992 Fire Scheme

The 1992 Fire Scheme closed to new membership in 2006. For this reason, The Firefighters' Pension Scheme (Scotland) (Transitional and Consequential Provisions ) Regulations 2015 made it clear, in amending Schedule 2 to the 2015 Scheme, that club transfer payments from other public service final salary pension schemes should be paid into the 2006 Fire Scheme and not into the 1992 Fire Scheme. However, it would be inequitable if existing members of the 1992 Firefighters' Schemes in England, Wales and Northern Ireland were not to be permitted to join the Scottish 1992 Fire Scheme on transferring to the Scottish Fire and Rescue Service (SFRS). The proposed amendment would permit such scheme transfers to take place.
